Quake Damage In Seattle Put Near $1,000,000

He May Do It Any Day

Signor Gayda has broken silence again; to say that Russia has adopted a policy of aggrandizement; that there is no direct accord between Moscow and Berlin; that the Soviet Union exploited Poland's weakness after the German victory; that for twenty years Moscow has worked for war in expectation that a Communist revolution would follow; and that in his efforts to preserve peace in the Balkans II Duce has had to encounter Russian pressure there.

There is nothing new in this recital, except that it comes from the editor of the Giornale d'Italia, who more often than any man is chosen to say what Mussolini really said but does not think it seems to say himself.

If Herr Hitler supposed he could induce Mussolini to perch on the same axis with Stalin he evidently misunderstood his man. The more Benito thinks about the double-crossing deal the madder he seems to get, or the less disposed to suffer the betrayal in silence. It must keep von Mackensen busy to keep him from stepping out on the balcony and making a speech.

Still Sticking

While he has adopted the Hitler "diplomatic" code in dealing with the Baltic states, credit is due to Stalin that he has not yet followed it up by the Hitler methods displayed in Czechoslovakia and Poland. The more credit because the Red army is up to claims it may have overrun little Finland in short order. It may still be launched upon that unfortunately situated country, but Moscow's forbearance thus far suggests there is no active desire to exploit it might by striking down a weak neighbor—as there certainly was at Berlin.

The negotiations so-called have been going on for weeks, and are still stalled, sufficient evidence as to the courage and tenacity of the Finns. The resistance they have shown has undoubtedly stimulated resolution in the Balkan states to fight Russian aggression in that quarter, and given time for the formation of a defensive understanding among these small countries, backed by Turkey and probably also by Italy. Whatever he gains in the Baltic, Stalin seems to have "missed the boat" in his plans to grab territory and dominate in the Baltic region. The failure to get the Finland business settled.

That Russia could get from Finland without force an exchange of territory reasonably required for the proper defence of Leningrad is altogether probable. But that Finland will submit to vivisection on the basis of concessions, and the demands, disclosed in dispatches last week, is another matter. If Stalin's purpose was to find out how much he could grab without fighting, the response is not encouraging to his expanding proposals.

Challenging a Show-Down

Mr. Tim Buck and the Dominion executive committee of the Communist party of Canada seem to have an idea that the War Measures Act and the defence regulations promulgated under authority of that Act are only intended to keep the peace-loving authors and distributors getting themselves in jail.

The information should be forthcoming, promptly, and in convincing fashion. This pamphlet was not written by parties who did not know they were transgressing the law. It is a deliberate infraction of the letter and spirit of the regulations, carrying internal evidence that malice and not ignorance—was the mental atmosphere in which it originated. If serious efforts were not made to discover the parties responsible for this open challenge to authority, and punishment dealt out, the regulations would be as well as repealed and everyone told to publish what he might please, true or false, slanderous and otherwise, regarding the motives of the Allies and the honesty of Canadian public men.

It is doubtful if the pamphlet itself could do much harm. It is more likely to arouse resentment than to undermine the loyalty of anyone who has been reading the facts which led up to the war and Canada's participation in it. But what must be corrected is the notion that democratic government means no government. Some who are pining, or claim to be pining, to live under a totalitarian regime, apparently think or hope that where there is no dictator there will be or can be an effective enforcement of law. That delusion must be cleared from their minds.

One Side Must Win

Right Hon. Winston Churchill is not going to be any more popular in Nazi circles because of his broadcast review on Sunday of the first ten weeks of war. But he has placed the Allied peoples, and the sympathetic peoples of neutral states as well, under further obligation for his clear-cut assurance that while the armies mark time and the human and material resources against aggression are being built up; that the Allies are now in all branches of their fighting forces stronger than they were when the war began; that their industrial and transport facilities have been geared to war requirements; and that spring will find the German dictators of the first round if bar weather or hesitation on the part of the enemy keeps field operations on a minor scale during the winter.

Another point Mr. Churchill cleared up, perhaps for the benefit of people in Germany as much as for others; that the fate of Czechoslovakia, Poland, and any other countries the Nazis may conquer will not be decided until the war is over. If the Allies win, justice will be done to these subjugated peoples. Their subjection to alien rule is not, with all respect to the pronouncements of the Fuehrer, the last word as to their future. Non-Nazi Germany will ponder that, when next the Fuehrer repeats the great things he has done for Germany.

If anyone had any doubts on the subject, the First Lord told them to dismiss these when he declared the war—if Herr Hitler insists on war—will have to be fought to a definite conclusion. It must be in the destruction of Hitlerism, or in the destruction of the British Empire and the Republic of France—leaving the United States the sole surviving great power to champion the rights of man and defend its own.

That is the ultimate fact, comprehensible to anyone who senses that there is no international law versus international banditry. On that issue there can be no compromise.

The Passing Show

By MAX FREEDMAN

The pungent and picturesque speech of Winston Churchill is steadily making him the spokesman of the empire, able to voice its ideals and express its hopes in language that is as eloquent and stirring as a bugle call. He once called himself a "mixture of Puck and Pitt." The cap and bells he sometimes wears, when in a jesting mood, is now put aside for the sword of the statesman, and none can wield it with better dexterity or more incomparable grace than the man who, as heir to Nelson's glory, guards the sea supremacy of Britain.

Churchill still suffers from the slight lisp which made his father think Winston never would be able to sway men's hearts by the power of impassioned speech. To conquer by his firmness, Churchill, for many years, used to memorize every word of his speeches, some of which he wrote out as often as three times in order to chide out the jewelled phrases in which he set his ideas. Then he deliberately allowed himself to get lost in his notes and blunder into an occasional infelicity of expression, swiftly corrected, in order to remove any suspicion that he was talking by rote.

By dint of long practice Churchill finally became a master of debate, applauded by friends, feared by foes, and respected by all. He ranks with the long list of orators, beginning with the tempestuous Demosthenes, end-shouting the surge of the thundering sea while talking with a crowd of people who manage to convert their initial frailties into stepping stones to success.

There is one memory of his campaign days. Churchill always looks back upon with profound revulsion. He regarded the struggle of women to gain the vote with an Olympian detachment but, when he heard that the women were enduring, until baiting Winston became their favorite national sport.

His revenge was a refinement in cruelty. The knew that Churchill was perfectly sure of his concluding two or three sentences in which he touched all the organs of his majestic eloquence. Till that portion of the speech arrived, the gentle ladies were perfectly still, gazing, lulling Churchill into the mistaken fancy that his words had flown away to peck at other politicians. But, just as he was in the full tide of his soaring eloquence, and uttering with loving care his most carefully turned phrases, the suffragettes, on a common signal, began to howl on whistles and drums.

Churchill had no option but to sink to his seat with the best part of his address marred by the malice of his gay enemies.

He has always thought that women are lucky radio was not invented when they were storming the seats of the mighty in order to enfranchise their sex. For Churchill, free from interruption, would have been able to deliver his speech over the microphone, his monumental sanity and massive logic would have won them more than a match for the whole embattled host of their kind.

History said Max Beerbohm, never repeats itself is only half true. Those who men are lucky radio was not invented when they were storming the seats of the mighty in order to enfranchise their sex. For Churchill, free from interruption, would have been able to deliver his speech over the microphone, his monumental sanity and massive logic would have won them more than a match for the whole embattled host of their kind.

SOME MUSINGS UPON HISTORY

Cleopatra's nose had been two inches longer or shorter for that matter. If Henry VIII had been a less amorous creature, or if Anne Boleyn had not been a bad bewitching fair, the Anglican church might have been a bad pagan position by fire when the dispirited youth tried to commit suicide, the whole history of India would have been completely different. If Sir Thomas More had rapped Shakespeare's head more sharply, that wild night in his orchard, William's brains might have run riot and the wisest man in this time of trouble lived to gather the tennings harvest of his mind.

The web of history is woven by the capricious hand of chance, who has laid out justly about the "laws of civilization" are as frivolous as the vain folk who once roamed the world in search of the philosopher's stone.

The war which now rages might never have come if an obscure Austrian had not decided to change his name. Hitler's father—illegitimate, by the way—was called "Alois Schickelgruber" until he decided to change it one day to give his son his own name. Hitler's father—illegitimate, by the way—was called "Alois Schickelgruber" until he decided to change it one day to give his son his own name. Hitler's father—illegitimate, by the way—was called "Alois Schickelgruber" until he decided to change it one day to give his son his own name.

No, if Hitler's father had not changed his name, Adolf would not have been a bad pagan position by fire when the dispirited youth tried to commit suicide, the whole history of India would have been completely different. If Sir Thomas More had rapped Shakespeare's head more sharply, that wild night in his orchard, William's brains might have run riot and the wisest man in this time of trouble lived to gather the tennings harvest of his mind.

On This Date

By FRED WILLIAMS

One hundred years ago today (Nov. 14, 1839), the citizens of Quebec, French and English, speaking alike, paid tribute at the funeral in Holy Trinity cathedral of Hon. Jonathan Sewell, who, after a brilliant career in law and politics, had been chief justice of the province. He lived as a lawyer, many of his decisions being accepted by modern courts, but Jonathan Sewell figured largely in the history of the union of the British North American colonies. Some people have dubbed him a "grandfather of confederation" for his advocacy of union, but he was not the first jurist to urge the change. That honor belongs to Hon. William Smith, also chief justice at Quebec, in 1775, but Sewell was the first to define a concrete plan for confederation.

Current Comment

Italy Grows Its Own

Italy has the largest per capita consumption of durum wheat in the world and is also one of the largest producers of the variety, states A. B. Muddiman, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Milan, in a report to the Department of Trade and Commerce. The outstanding feature of wheat consumption in Italy is the importance of alimentary pastes in the national diet.

At present Italy is nearly or wholly self-sustaining in wheat and wheat products. The recent increase in production has been the use of selected seed. Comparing the wheat crop of 1938 with an average one prior to 1914, the increase has been 62 per cent. The average yield per acre last year was 23.91 bushels as compared with 18.91 bushels prior to the last war. The objective of the Italian government is a total crop of 300,000,000 bushels. During the last two years yields of approximately 300,000,000 bushels have been attained. Italy is unlikely to be a heavy importer of Canadian wheat in the future except in poor crop years.

How Britain Will Pay

Britain announces that it is not looking only for supplies but also for markets for the two things, of course, are complementary and inseparable in the long run. You cannot get supplies unless you pay for them, and you cannot pay for them unless you export goods to the countries which will buy them.

That is Britain's problem now. It is hoarding its gold supply and its holdings of foreign securities. These will be liquidated to pay for special and essential imports like airplanes while payment cannot be made in goods. Where it can pay in goods, there Britain will buy. It is looking for large war exports. Britain, Canada will be paid so far as possible in goods. If they wish to help their own country and Britain also, Canadians will buy British goods. They have been buying British goods for some time. An increasing volume of British imports into Canada will certainly relieve some of the great difficulties of exchange during the war and of debt after the war.

Still, with all the trade we can hope for during the war period it seems likely that we shall have to sell to Britain substantial amounts of goods on credit. After the war how will those debts be paid? They can only be paid in goods, as the United States found out after the last war when it refused to refund the gold for foreign loans. In Canada we shall probably face the same choice on a smaller scale—Vancouver Sun.

Mexico Looks to Canada

"War in Europe has opened up to Canadian manufacturers and exporters opportunities in Mexico which have hitherto been closed to them because of their inability to compete in price," this statement was contained in a report received by the Department of Trade and Commerce from R. T. Young, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Mexico City. "During the past decade Germany has been a large supplier of the country's requirements," he continues, "and to a greater extent following the government appropriation of foreign oil companies in March, 1938, when Germany was able to trade with other European countries adversely affected by the hostilities. Mexicans in general must look elsewhere for supplies."

"As was to be expected, Canada is one of the countries to which importers and merchants in Mexico have turned in the hope that she will be able to supply their requirements. Opportunities are offered Canadian manufacturers and exporters in a position to supply, and there is presented the further opportunity of consolidating themselves in this market where heretofore they have found it next to impossible to even gain entry."

Mexico's imports from Germany were valued at $2,702,174 in 1938 (one opportunity in approximately 22 cents).—Commercial Intelligence Journal.

I mean the man who plans the lighting for most Christian churches. He delights in placing the lights alongside of, or directly behind, the preacher, so that the glare hinders both clear thinking. When he can this architect or builder, or commissionaire, who is definitely aiding the adversary side of souls, put a clear window behind the pulpit.

In a popular view, the "Eyes" would have it that the incorrect lighting of lights in a church is a hindrance to worship.

Your Health — By Dr. Frank McCoy

Auto-intoxication is a state which is capable of causing the patient to be both mentally and physically depressed most of the time.

Often the patient will not understand the cause of his feeling under par, as he may have had an examination and been told there is nothing organically wrong with him. In such a case, it will usually be found that the patient is simply suffering from a self-poisoning, which will be relieved by the use of a small diet and a few laxatives.

When the complete health examination demonstrates that the organs are perfectly normal, but the patient still complains of tiredness, dizziness, coated tongue, and the frequent attacks of "the blues," it is generally a good plan to assume that he is suffering from some type of auto-intoxication and is being poisoned by toxins produced within his own body.

Sixth, too hot water. All of the functions of the body are carried out within a fluid medium, and the cells are literally bathed in a constant sea of fluid. The toxic patient is usually helped by drinking five or six glasses of pure water.

Dr. Frank McCoy's great book, "The Mechanism of Health," shows you the mechanics of health in a simple, easy-to-understand way. PERKY PEPUUM PROCK
New Lines for a New Figure

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
Something new for that bridge supper? How about crisp ham waffles with a sauce made of canned button mushrooms and chicken stock. The men will like it and the women won't object either.

Canned mushrooms come in three packs—button, sliced and stems and pieces. Each mushroom canner carries each of these packs when you buy them for home use—cans (1 1/2 cup), 4 ounces (1 cup), and 8 ounces (2 cups).

HAM WAFFLES
(Serves 4)

Two cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup finely shredded boiled ham, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 eggs, 1 1/2 cups milk, 4 tablespoons melted buttering.

Sift dry ingredients together. Beat egg yolk until thick and lemon colored. Mix with milk and stir. Add sifted flour and melted buttering and shredded ham. Fold stiffly beaten egg whites into this mixture. Bake in hot waffle iron. Serve at once with chicken-mushroom sauce.

CHICKEN-MUSHROOM SAUCE

Three tablespoons butter, 1 1/2 cups can (2 cups) button mushrooms, 3 tablespoons cream, 1/2 cup chicken stock, 1/2 cup fresh chicken brains, powdered salt, pepper.

Melt butter in skillet and brown mushrooms. Add cream, chicken stock, salt and pepper. Simmer 10 minutes. Add brains and simmer 5 minutes. Serve at once with chicken-mushroom sauce.

A pecky pepum in the latest fashion will do much to pep up your fall wardrobe. The new try waistcoat look is no becoming, especially when it is complimented by a flaring skirt. Button your jacket blouse close under your chin and frame your face with a cape and open white pique collar. Velvet in a dark woody green, or for more sophisticated, black flake, will make the smartest costume in your wardrobe this season. If you like a button blouse look take tucked on the back and can easily be removed if you tire of it. A hat to match complements the ensemble.

Style No. 2999 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material, 1/2 yard of 39-inch material, 15 cents extra.

Watch Your Weight When Thirty Looms

By ALICIA HART

Just about the best presents any woman can give herself on her thirtieth birthday are bathroom scales, a calory chart and a note which says, "I never intend to weigh more than—pounds."

Once she has set a figure, mile up her mind that she never intends to weigh more than that and then proceeds to live at weight over that figure as soon as she has gained it. It's a fairly simple matter to remain profitably slim through the years.

The difficulty with most people is that they don't start worrying about their weight until they have gained five pounds or more. And this in spite of the very well-known fact that it's a simple matter to lose two pounds, but usually a dreadful ordeal to lose more than five.

For anyone inclined to gain weight easily, bathroom scales kept in a handy spot, are a real necessity. It's a mistake to depend on how your clothes fit or what your friends say about your figure. Weigh yourself once a week and get the fact—not a theory.

AS WELL AS WEIGHT
In addition to keeping a careful eye on your weight, check your measurements at least twice a year. If you are thicker through the waistline even though you have not gained any weight, exercise is all that is needed. Don't allow yourself to be fat.

Don't let anyone discourage you about trying to gain a pound or two. There are no two ways about it—eat less and exercise more. You will lose weight. If you don't, better see your family doctor at once. It may be that some organic ailment and not just plain over-eating is causing you to gain.

In the main, however, obesity is caused by over-eating. Those who are fat are usually fat because of the true fact that it's possible to eat enough food to ward off hunger without taking a chance of adding to one's weight. So the calory chart comes in handy, making it simple to pick dishes of low calory content. This is important to any weight-watcher.

Fourth, we agree that if a girl has a habit of getting to bed late, she is bound to be fat. The average girl can't afford to do such things as go to bed late, but when she does, she is bound to be fat. It's not the late bedtime that is the trouble, it's the late bedtime that is the trouble, it's the late bedtime that is the trouble.

Sixth, we like girls who are not too easy. We like to do the charting.

What To Do
The woman whose speech bristles with crude slang is sure to feel uncomfortable with people whose talk is charming and correct. They can't conceal their amazement at such remarks as "That kid hit the old man on the beam with his slingshot." Child and Head are the words, more cultivated speakers would use, as she could easily find out.

Errors in English provoke amazed comments too. Writing to say "Mary wanted to borrow a hat off me, but I wasn't to home." Correct is "Mary wanted to borrow a hat from me, but I wasn't at home."

And do you risk being by calling everything you like "terrible"? Are you vocabulary-poor?

From our 32-page booklet learn how to build a large, vivid vocabulary, give your talk "bite," correct common errors, correct forms, slang phrases to avoid. Give right meaning of words often misused, pronunciation tips.

Send 15 cents in coin for your copy of "How To Improve Your Vocabulary." The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service Department, Edmonton, Alberta. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

KEEP KIDDY HAPPY
Every self-respecting cat likes to see her claws in the finest condition—even the apartment cat that seldom gets a chance to scratch a tree. Give her a sturdy, short post with the back leg on, mounted up close to a firm base, and you'll save money on slip-covers and upholstery. An old tire or piece of discarded carpet which will soon disappear in her very own, will keep kitty content.

CONVENIENT ALARM
When a calory call for a definite baking time, set the kitchen alarm clock to ring at the time the dough should come out of the oven. The alarm clock can then go about doing its own work without the danger of household cake or charred cake, forsooth.

MRS. A. BROWN HIT BY AUTO: BADLY INJURED

Aged Mother Of Garrison Commandant In Critical Condition

Mrs. Alice Brown, 70, of Suite 2, Galtblock Block, and mother of Col. G. Brown, adjutant and commandant of the Edmonton Garrison, is in a serious condition in the Royal Alexandra Hospital after having been struck by an auto at the intersection of 103 street and Jasper Avenue, Monday evening.

Run into hospital in a Star Ambulance the aged woman, who, in spite of the severity of her injuries was conscious, was found to be suffering from fracture of both legs below the knee, fracture of the left forearm, fracture of ribs on her left side and a severe head injury.

Driver of the auto which struck Mrs. Brown, Roy Usher, of 10312 116 street, told police that he was driving west on Jasper Avenue at about 20 miles per hour. He did not see Mrs. Brown until she suddenly appeared just about three feet ahead of his auto. It was impossible for him to make her although he put on his brakes immediately, he told police.

Condition of the street—wet and black—made visibility poor, police officers said. Usher was arrested on a charge of dangerous driving, which was released on bail.

RIGID METHODS TAX COLLECTIONS URGED IN COUNCIL

Suggestion that more rigid methods be employed in tax collection, particularly in the business tax, was made by Ald. G. Campbell, at the inaugural meeting of the new council Monday.

"I believe that collections of taxes on business properties, and particularly on the business taxes, should be better," he said.

"We must expect the commission to be 'Commissioner John Hedges' said. 'Our policy has been to compromise. It may be that we have been too lenient in some cases, but we have not wanted to put any concern out of business if there was any chance of their being able to pay it. We have been trying it along. We may have lost some money by this method but I think in many cases we have been kind.'"

"I think the collections have been pretty good," Mayor John W. Fry commented. "This year the collection of current and arrears levy will top 110 per cent of the levy. We can't do too hard-boiled."

CITY STUDIES LIGHTING FOR TRAFFIC LANE

Casselman Says Some Streets Equivalent To "Blackout"

City council will receive a report from commissioners at its next meeting on the cost of improving lighting along 104 avenue, which was paved in 1938.

Ald. F. C. Casselman, at Monday's inaugural meeting, asked that the cost of lighting this thoroughfare be the same as that of 99 street on the South Side, which has bracket lamps along the roadway.

Ald. M. R. McColl suggested that improved lighting might have prevented the accident Saturday night in which Charles Pruden of Prince Albert was killed by a car on 104 avenue.

"Many places in the city are equivalent to a 'blackout', Ald. Casselman said.

Interpreted following the meeting, William Hedges, city electric light superintendent, said that 104 avenue at present has one street lamp to a block. There is no side walk on the avenue.

Mr. Hedges stated that the city has been carrying out a program of improving and repairing street lighting in all parts of the city, reaching the sections most affected.

Cyclist Injured

For the next 24 months he won't have to worry about the pen, or where his next meal is coming from or what he is going to do Saturday night. Everything has been arranged for and anyone willing to correspond with him should address a blank, grab a bunch of blank cheques, fill his fountain pen with the bank's ink, and then scribble off a few cheques. He won't need to do that. He won't need to do that. He won't need to do that.

NAME IN CASE OF E. J. O'HARE

Allege Gang Lord Voiced Threats Against Turfman

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—The discoverer of a letter, relating that Al

Bearing the signature "George", the letter was found in a book in O'Hare's secret north side apartment. The envelope carried a St. Louis postmark dated Oct. 6, 1937.

The letter had been sent from one friend of O'Hare to another. The writer said he had been told of the threats by two former inmates of Alcatraz prison and urged the recipient to warn O'Hare.

MANY ARGUMENTS

"You know," the letter said in part, "O'Hare and him had many arguments and disputes over them tracks. I think the sore spot is something in connection with Sportsman's Park."

The Capone group was the original owner of Sportsman's Park. Al-

One time O'Hare managed a Chicago dog track in which Capone had an interest.

State's Attorney Thomas Coughlin called the letter of warning "one of the most interesting clues ever to come into our hands in a case of this kind."

PAINTER HELD

Meanwhile investigators held Peter Szent, a painter, in protective custody after he gave them the first eye witness account of the slaying.

Szent said he saw O'Hare killed by shotgun blast fired by one of two men in a car that overtook the turfman's automobile on Ogden avenue last Wednesday.
